Hydrolysis of casein by preparations of adult and foetal bovine milk was studied in vitro. Adult, vitamin-supplemented and'self-milk' casein hydrolysates were found to contain a molar ratio of 1.4-1.5:1.0:1.8, whilst foetal bovine casein hydrolysates contained a molar ratio of 1.5-1.7:1.0-1.2. Adult and vitamin-supplemented casein hydrolysates showed no coagulant activity, but foetal casein hydrolysates gave a coagulant response, which was inhibited by milk serum. Adult and vitamin-supplemented casein hydrolysates were more efficient than foetal casein hydrolysates in the coagulation of chromogenic substrates (H-D-Pro-Arg-pNA). On the basis of their coagulant properties, it was concluded that preparations of adult and vitamin-supplemented milk were more suitable than foetal bovine milk for the preparation of casein hydrolysates.Q: Importing objects from file in Matlab gives wrong results when memory is increased I'm trying to read a string file containing the list of objects with given properties. However, I'm not getting the correct results when I increase the working memory of Matlab to minimize the time taken in reading. I think something is wrong with matlab loading of the memory. c6a93da74d
