Afrikaans Essay On A Day At The Beach

The Florida Coastal Land and Water Management Fund is composed of monies appropriated annually through the annual budget. The fund is managed by the Department of Environmental Protection, and includes the following programs: the Coastal and Marine Sciences Program; and the Beachfront Management Program. Using data collected by the Coastal Construction Control Program, part of the Florida Beach and Shore Preservation Act, Florida was able to determine with a high degree of certainty that about 80 percent of Florida beachfront development does not require the use of fill material, such as sand or concrete, for construction projects. In addition, about 60 percent of development for which fill is required did not need the consent of the Coastal Protection and Restoration Authority before allowing the project to proceed. Rather than using seawalls, groins and other means to arrest erosion and protect the coast, another option is to implement shoreline protection projects that use native beach material as a part of the project design. Projects that employ native beach material include dune restoration and beach nourishment (replacing seaward of the high water line). Construction projects using fill material have a high potential for affecting future use of the beach and associated wetlands. The C&NDs collaborate with the Authority to prepare a programmatic, fundable Coastal Construction Control Plan, establish a fee for permits, and implement the Florida Beach and Shore Preservation Act. This involves reviewing permit applications from both public and private sources and providing local government permitting of permit holders. As of Oct. 1, 2019, the C&NDs administer the Beach and Shore Preservation permit fee for construction activities using fill material in the coastal zone.

The department is charged with assuring state compliance with CERCLA (Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act) environmental clean-up requirements. The CERCLA act requires the department to perform environmental assessments on areas along the coast to determine whether or not there are hazardous waste sites that are covered by the act. Some areas of the beaches along the coast are classified as FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) Emergency Hazard Areas (EHAs) for which, under the act, the state must notify any federal responders as to those EHAs. Currently, the beachfront from the mainland north to the Intracoastal Waterway is considered to be an EHA, and the shoreline from the mainland south to Cedar Key is considered to be an EHA. The department is also charged with enforcing strict compliance with the Florida Water and Land Conservation Act. The Act requires the department to prevent unauthorized development of sand resources in and along the Floridas shoreline. Once again, some areas of the beach, from the mainland north to the Intracoastal Waterway, are considered to be a no-vesting area for development. One of the beach management funding assistance programs administered by the department is a grant program through which the department administers a matching-grant-fund program to assist local government units in the development of beachfront comprehensive coastal planning and management plans and to provide funds and technical assistance for coastal engineering and geology study and research.

The department, with Congressional approval, has been able to substantially increase the amount of funds available for this program for the past five years. This increase in funding allows the department to fund beach management projects in addition to the current statewide beach protection goals. 5ec8ef588b
