x-ray diffraction ( xrd ) is a powerful tool to look at crystals for characterizing microstructural and crystallographic properties of powders, thin films, fibers and other solid materials. the mcf has recently added another xrd, a malvern panalytical mpd to its capabilities. this xrd has a flat sample stage (default) for the analysis of powders and small solids, a non-ambient stage capable of running from -196c-450c, and a reflectivity stage. it should be on sums no later than 8/12/2019! we are glad to announce that we have added the following diffractometers: malvern panalytical x'pert pro (mds) mds 900 x-ray diffractometer mds 1500 x-ray diffractometer mds 3000 x-ray diffractometer mds 4000 x-ray diffractometer highscore allows you to perform automated or manual analysis of your powder x-ray diffraction data. it is also ideal to examine your powder x-ray diffraction pattern and match it to the icdd database for fast phase identification. it is highly recommended to use the full power of the highscore package, including all its third-party tools, especially for the examination of your single powder x-ray diffraction pattern. highscore allows you to export your diffraction patterns in the standard icdd pdf format. for data analysis, highscore includes a full suite of tools, including graphical and statistical plotting tools, data preparation and normalization, profile fitting, rietveld refinement and much more. furthermore, the included graphics editor can be used to create and display intensity data in any form.
