While this may not be the most common form of social media hacking, there are many social media hacking tools available on the internet, and accessing and abusing a victim's Instagram account is another easy way for hackers to go social media-spying. This is just the tip of the iceberg, as social media hacking tools are also used to attack targets' bank accounts and steal funds, and modify credit card charges. You should never use anything other than your name in a email. It will prevent people from being able to link your email, social media accounts, and other data together. In order for a hacker to impersonate you, the hacker needs your password. More obvious than the scanning, and also quite likely to catch a lot of people off guard, is simply asking someone how to do something. By sending a bunch of emails, or texts to relatives and friends that just innocently ask for advice on a wide range of topics, hackers can learn more about which networks are weakest and how to more easily exploit them. First, I'm going to start by telling you that the prior no-computer home hackers are completely wrong. While its true that you need to have access to a computer in order to hack a computer system, you don't need to have a computer in order to hack a computer system. Not having access to a computer is irrelevant. You can hack your own web browsers, your email, your phone, or any other computer systems without ever using a computer. There are two reasons why: Most people don't know where the BIOS is located, and most people are lazy. The reason they're lazy is because, on most computers, it's buried deep inside the guts of the machine. That means that, in order to access the BIOS, the hacker needs to take apart or remove the entire machine and find the BIOS. That's usually something only a hardware hacker is willing to do.
