the film follows the research of marine biologist emil buell, who believes that he has found a new species of fish in the waters off antarctica. he names the fish as "paula antarctica", and gives it its own wikipedia page. during the research, he comes across a beautiful and mysterious woman who he believes is the fish's mate. he follows her to a remote island, where he finds her tending to her babies. the girl in question is none other than the legendary mermaid, ellen ripley, who was the protagonist of the first two alien movies. but this discovery is not without controversy, as people question the scientific validity of herzog's claims. there are those who doubt that the fish exists, and others who claim that the character is nothing more than a piece of fiction. i'll tell you what i think about it: the biggest difference between science and fiction is that in science you're willing to change your mind, and in fiction, you're not. but, after seeing the documentary, i do believe that it's true. when i first saw the trailer for this movie, i did not think much of it. then it got nominated for the academy award, and i was hooked. i have been a huge fan of the original star wars, and i love the indiana jones franchise. so, when i got the chance to watch it in a theater, i figured it would be a pleasant experience. i was pleasantly surprised to see just how much i liked it. i must admit that the indiana jones franchise is a great set of movies, but the first two, with raiders of the lost ark and indiana jones and the temple of doom, were much better than the others.
