mestare's warriors exist in a land that once thrived in glory, an era dominated by great civilizations with the potential to move into the stars. mestare's lost their way, and the climate has fallen into anarchy and perpetual warfare. the once-proud republic has now become a chaotic wasteland. mestare's once led the world, but now have been forced to eke out an existence in the slums and refuse-bins. mestare's once boasted a state-of-the-art, versatile and versatile military technology. however, with no arms dealer and no civil war, mestare's have now reverted to the most primitive level of technology that is available to them. in order to survive, the people of mestare's are increasingly forced to turn to criminal organizations and other illegal activities, which in the past were entirely out of their reach. the air support, reinforcements and artillery available to you over the course of a mission are determined by the mission time; operations have scheduled phases that require you to time certain strategic and tactical maneuvering. for instance, your air support may not reach the mission area until a half hour after your first mechs hit the ground, and the fighters and bombers only have enough fuel to stay airborne over the battlefield to provide ground support for a couple hours before having to return to base. calling in air-strikes and off-board indirect artillery bombardment can be tricky, because they are not instantaneous; an enemy you can see in combat will almost always be moving, so any strikes on their location will miss. instead, you will need to call in strikes against general areas (highways and bridgeheads, usually) to create a blanket of fire in which you will hopefully be able to catch unseen enemies.
