There has been significant progress toward implementing the FCPS Vision 2020 Initiative, which is a directive to increase access to digital learning opportunities and to enhance teaching and learning. The current state of FCPS' digital learning is showcased in the following on-demand stories. Impact of Innovative Video Conferencing Students in Fairfax County Public Schools (FCPS) schools must complete approximately nine hours per week of face-to-face instruction to be eligible for federal Free and Reduced-price Meal eligibility, and at least 30 hours per week to receive the full benefits of the federal free and reduced-price meal programs. The school provides face-to-face instruction for up to 17 hours per week of "core classes" (math, language, science, and social studies) and supports required after-school and summer school activities. To supplement the core classes, FCPS provides universal access to instructional video conferencing that allows students to interact face to face with instructors and other students at all times during the school day. Video conference instruction is used by FCPS to supplement the core classes, as well as for instruction for students with specific needs. FCPS has the ability to provide at-home instruction for students with autism spectrum disorder (ASD), ADHD, disabilities, and additional learning needs. In addition to providing access to instruction, FCPS offers off-site instruction for FCPS or private school students with similar needs. FCPS does not charge tuition for after school hours or summer school instruction because FCPS provides the instruction, including instructors. FCPS does not use video conferencing for FCPS teachers to teach FCPS classes. We have found that extending the face-to-face instruction beyond the core classes by providing universal access to video conferencing has a positive impact on FCPS students. Students in the video conference group: (1) remain more academically engaged; (2) perform better on FCPS assessments; and (3) have higher rates of participation in FCPS programs. Video conference technology provides the flexibility needed to serve students in a variety of learning environments, which can positively impact their education. The video conference supports all types of students and does not exclude any students from participating in after-school learning and summer school. Video conference instruction has allowed FCPS to provide after school and summer school instruction to students in rural locations and to students in special education classrooms. FCPS has partnered with Student Assistance.gov to provide the video conferencing technology to students, including those in rural and special education locations.
